Let it Shine!

with our Solar Appeal

About 80% of homes in South Africa now have access to electricity, but power cuts are still common – especially in rural areas.

Up to 40% of South Africans still use kerosene regularly for heating, lighting and cooking – which is a highly-flammable and toxic fuel. While some rely on torches with expensive batteries for emergency lighting.

Now a new generation of cheap, high-performing solar lights can provide clean, safe lighting and phone charging. These lights cost relatively little, last over five years and require no specialist installation or maintenance.

Thuso is launching a new appeal to provide lamps to the children and families we support at Thuto Lesedi and Lobethal schools – because children without light can't study! We also hope to explore the possibility of a revolving fund to get lights to more people.

Help us bring solar lamps to South Africa!

I would like to donate: ☐ £7.50 for a study light    ☐ £15 for a family lantern    ☐ £35 for a solar lantern and mobile charger or £..... towards solar lights for South Africa (please tick as appropriate)
